ABSTRACTS

OF

Inquisitions post Mortem,

MADE BY

CHRISTOPHER TOWNELEY AND ROGER DODSWORTH.

EXTRACTED FROM MANUSCRIPTS AT TOWNELEY.

EDITED BY

WILLIAM LANGTON.

VOL. II.

PRINTED FOR THE CHETHAM SOCIETY.
M.DCCC.LXXVI.

PRINTED BY CHARLES E. SIMMS,
MANCHESTER.

INTRODUCTION.

IN addition to the copy made by the Editor from Christopher Towneley's "Abstracts of Inquisitions Post Mortem," he has introduced a few similar documents out of other volumes by the same hand, and also some Abstracts from the Public Records, for which he is indebted to the kindness of Mr. W. HARDY.

To Mr. J. F. BEEVER he also owes thanks for the official copy of Sir James Haryngton's will at p. 167, which confirms the corrections offered in the preface to vol. xcviii. of the copy of that document made by Vincent, and printed by the Rev. Canon Raines in his History of the Chantries, vol. lix, p. 127. It proves by the absence of a superfluous "and" in Vincent's copy, the correctness of the parentage of Isabella, Sir James Haryngton's wife, as given by the Rev. Canon Raines.

The close connexion of the Haryngton family with that of Pilkington has given the Editor occasion to introduce in the Supplement notices of the latter family, about whom many erroneous statements have been current; he takes the opportunity of here mentioning that at p. 111 of vol. xcv.

Elizabeth Pilkington, who married Sir William Haryngton, was incorrectly stated to have been named in the entail of 8 Henry VI., whereas it was her mother-in-law Elizabeth Bradshaw, the wife of Sir Richard Haryngton, who was so named.

The Editor has met with the notice of a Fine, 50 Edward III., to which the second Thomas de Lathom and Johanna his wife were parties, by which it would appear that failing the issue of Thomas, who was apparently his son by his first wife, their daughter Isabella and her heirs male were next in succession; this upholds the usual record of the parentage of Isabella, the heiress who brought Lathom and Knowsley to the Stanleys, and contradicts the opinion expressed by him on p. 20, vol. xcv, that her mother was Isabella, daughter of Sir Roger de Pilkington.

He begs to call attention to the notes appended to the inquisition on the death of William de Holand at pp. 135 and 136, in which he believes he has succeeded in exposing the mistake of Sir William Dugdale, who deduced the descent of the Hollands of Denton and Heton from an imaginary younger son of Sir Robert de Holand, the first baron of that name, and so sanctioned in their coat the quarters brought in by his marriage with the heiress of De la Zouche.

It was to the forfeiture suffered by this Lord Robert de Holand, in consequence of his abetting the rebellion of Thomas Earl of Lancaster, that we have the record of the date at which Alice the heiress of Banastre had ceased to be in life, the estates in the Fee of Makerfeld being then held of her surviving husband, Sir John de Langeton, who held them by the courtesy of England.* This date was by great carelessness printed at p. 95, as in the reign of Richard the 2nd instead of Edward the 2nd.

For this and any other clerical errors which may have escaped the vigilance of his Secretary, Mr. Charles Daniel, the Editor must offer the apology of the blindness with which he has been afflicted; this may have caused other imperfections in a work which might have had more value some years ago than now, when the public records have been made so accessible. To these the local historian should have recourse instead of repeating matter at second hand, which is so frequently done; not that the labours of former collectors are to be under-valued, for, as an instance to the contrary, he can mention that Kuerden's Extracts have supplied the age of an heir where the original record in the Duchy Office was mutilated.

The contemporary labours of the three Lancashire antiquaries, Dodsworth, Kuerden and Towneley, have left us abstracts of the deeds of private families which are invaluable, and it is a great pity that all these collections are not easily accessible to the student. The Rev. G. J. Piccope, when an undergraduate, copied from Dodsworth's MSS. in the Bodleian Library all that he found unpublished relating to Lancashire, and his copies are now in the Library of Chetham College, Manchester.

Kuerden's MSS. are very difficult to decipher. Two volumes are in the Library of the Chetham College, and besides what are to be found in the British Museum there are seven volumes in the Library of the College of Arms. There is evidence that these gentlemen freely communicated with each other and with Sir W. Dugdale, and that Kuerden and Towneley had contemplated the joint production of a History of the County Palatine.

Christopher Towneley was an Attorney. Dr. Whitaker calls him "the indefatigable transcriber"; he employed his clerks in making abstracts of all the muniments that fell in his way. He compiled two volumes of Pedigrees, with references for evidence to his various volumes of collections, and these formed the basis of the Lancashire Pedigrees preserved in various families in the county.* It is much to be

* We recognise this fact in the repetition of certain errors into which he had fallen, for instance those pointed out at p. 96, by the introduc-

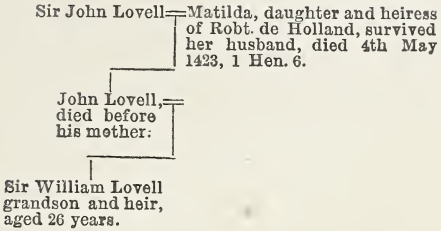
[3] This word has caused much speculation. We have not met with it elsewhere than in the Hundred of Lonsdale; and there we find it in use at Nether-Kellet, Heysham, Overton and Gressingham.

The word "Cornuale" as printed in the Inquisition on Edmund Dacre, p. 78, vol. xcv. of the Chetham series should no doubt have been Coumole.

Mr. Wm. Hardy, F.S.A., has come to the conclusion that it is a contracted form of Communale or Coumudal as used in some parts of France, and is applied to common of pasture. He gives references to Roquefort's Glossaire de la langue Romane, sub voce Coumunal, "paturages communs d'un ou plusieurs villages."—Ducange sub voce Communale has also Coumudal, with the same meaning.

[4] Videlicet Hundred of West Derby.



In the inquisition held on the death of Sir Robert de Holand, the second lord of Parliament of that name, 47 Edw. III., Matilda is stated to be seventeen years of age and to be the heir of her grandfather, being daughter of Robert, the son of Robert,* and then wife of John Lovel. Her father, Robert (who died v. p.), had a younger brother John,† who at his father's death inherited the estates held in tail male, viz., the manor of Torrisholme held of the king as of his duchy of Lancaster in socage, half the manor of Brightmed held of the same by knight's service, two bovates of land in Harwood of the barony of Manchester, half the manor of Hadoc of Henry de Langton, one bovate of land in Newton and one in Over Derwent (described in another inquisition as three burgages in Newton and one in Over Derwent) also of Henry de Langton. He appears to have died on the feast of St. Peter 29 Hen. VI. (29th June 1451), when he was succeeded by Henry, Duke of Exeter, as next of kin and heir.

The whole of these possessions, the inheritance of Robert, Lord Holand, in Lancashire, fell to the crown by forfeiture of the Duke of Exeter and of the heirs of Lovel respectively. The former had married a sister of King Edward IV., to whom his inheritance was given, and which ultimately reverted to the crown. The property in Newton above cited was named the manor of Newton in the entry on the Rolls of Parliament, and this was probably the cause of the statement in Baines' History of Lancashire, that the barony of Newton had been forfeited by and regranted to the Langtons, whereas no such occurrences took place. This statement was corrected in the second edition.

* This generation is omitted in Dugdale's Baronage.

† In the Historie Peerage, the second lord is stated to have died s. p. m., but this is evidently a mistake.

Sir Henry de Hoghton had an illegitimate son named Richard, from whom descended the Hoghtons of Little Pendleton, an estate which was part of the inheritance of Johanna, his father's wife, probably yielded to him as a compromise after sundry debates with the Talbots of Salebury, who were the heirs of Johanna, being descended from Isabella, daughter of Richard de Cliderow, brother of Sir Robert de Cliderou, the father of Sibilla, who was the mother of Johanna by her first marriage with Richard de Radcliffe of Ordsall. Vide note, p. 105 vol. xcv.

In the earlier editions of Whitaker's History of Whalley Richard is improperly represented as the issue of Sir Henry and his wife Johanna.

[1] A curious divorce case is on record between John de Towneley and Isabell his wife, daughter of Nicholas Butler of Rawcliff. It was a childless marriage, and hence, probably, the desire for a divorce. Twenty-four years prior to the suit, John de Towneley, then a minor, had married Isabella at the door of the church of St. Michael-upon-Wyre, she being also of tender years. The plea for the dissolution of the marriage was, that before that time Isabella had contracted herself, per verba de presenti, in her father's orchard, with John de Thornton, a neighbour; two witnesses declaring that they had heard the mutual engagement made to take each other as husband and wife until death, thereto pledging their faith. This must have been mere child's play. At the date of the divorce evidence was given that John de Thornton was dead four years before that time, and that he was buried in the chantry of the parish church of Poulton-in-le-Fylde. This John de Thornton was in all probability the son of John named in this Inquisition, who had died before 1429. The contract between Richard Towneley and Nicholas Butler, for the marriage of John and Isabella, their children, is dated 22 August 1418, 6 Henry V.

[2] He seems to have been contracted in marriage by his father in the life time of his grandfather and grandmother, i.e., when he was less than seven years old.

[1] The properties in Leyland Hundred mentioned in the first recited settlement, were doubtless the inheritance of the Radcliffs by the marriage of William de Radcliff with Katherine, daughter and coheir of Adam de Norlegh, whose elder sister and coheir, Matilda, was the wife of Sir Robert de Legh, and ancestress of the Leghs of Lyme who used her coat as their arms. The mother of these two ladies was named Margeria, and was the representative of the family of Walton of Ulneswalton, of which family Warren de Walton,* named in Testa de Nevill, had been the head. Finding argent, a mullet sable, quartered both by the Bartons of Smithells and the Leghs of Lime, leads to the inference that it was the paternal coat of Walton.

* We find from deeds in the possession of the family of Legh of Lyme that Warin de Waleton had a son, Adam, who had a grant from Richard Bussell, of half the manor of Leyland with appertenances, and that he, in 29 Edward I., granted the same to Adam de Walton, Lord of Hole, with remainder to another Adam de Walton, son of a younger Warin, which Adam appears to have been of Mitton; the next in remainder was his brother William, a literate whom the grantor had brought up from his infancy; Margeria, the daughter of another brother, John, then deceased, being the last in remainder. A fine was levied at York in the same year confirmatory of this entail in which the following properties were recited, viz., the manor of Walton, lands in Leyland and Kelgnymsargh, and a moiety of the manors of Eccleston, Heskyn and Leyland. The first named parties having all died without issue, it was found in 39 Edward III. that the successors were Robert de Legh and Matilda his wife, and William de Radclyff and Katherine his wife; the said Matilda and Katherine being daughters and heirs of Margeria aforesaid, who had married Adam de Norleigh, whose estate lay in the adjacent township of Pemberton.

Isabella, died according to this Inquisition on the feast of St. Peter, in Cathedra (22 Feb.) 11 Henry 6, 1432; but in another copy of the same Inquisition the date of her death is stated to be on the feast of St. Peter, ad Vincula which would be 1st of August in the same year. ═ John Talbot, son of William Talbot, a younger son of Sir Edmund Talbot of Bashall. Vide Inq. p m. 27 Henry 6.

John Talbot, son and heir, aged 6 years 1432, 11 Henry 6

Isabella Talbot died before her husband as is proved by the Inquisition taken after his death in 27 Henry VI. hereafter printed. She is erroneously described in some of the pedigrees as having a second husband, and this has been repeated in the entry of the Talbot pedigree at p. 297 in vol. lxxxviii. of the Chetham series, which professes to be the visitation by Sir William Dugdale.

Dr. Whitaker in his History of Whalley states that Isabella, the heiress of the Salebury estate, was the daughter of Sibilla de Cliderou by her second husband Sir Richard Mauleverer. This has been repeated by various writers, but it is an erroneous statement. She had no such daughter, nor had she any son by Sir Roger de Fulthorp her third husband, as stated by Mr. Foss. Her heiress, by Sir Richard de Radcliffe, her first husband, was Johanna, married to Sir Henry de Hoghton, and she died s.p. Isabella was cousin to the aforesaid Sibilla, being the daughter of Richard de Cliderou, brother of Sir Robert, the father of Sibilla.

The error, as to the parentage of Isabella, originated by the misinterpretation of a charter in which Sibilla, after she had become the wife of Sir Richard Mauleverer, names the daughter of her first marriage. Sir William Dugdale is not responsible for these errors as might be supposed by the entry at p. 297, vol. lxxxviii. It is much to be regretted, that the pedigrees in the latter portion of part iii. of this visitation, vol. lxxxviii., from letter S inclusive, were not collated with the office copy, for I have found them inaccurate when I have had the opportunity of comparing them. See note on Sibilla de Fulthorp, vol. xcv. p. 105, and notes at pp. 41 and 42 of Visitation 1533; and also pedigrees of Cliderou and Talbot in the new edition of the History of Whalley which were compiled from evidences of those families.

INQUISITIO capta apud Clidderhow die Martis proxⁿ ante festum Circumsitionis Dñi Anno 11 Henry VI. coram Jacobo de Croft Escaetor p. sacramentum RICHARDI DE HOUGHTON Chr Willielmi de Ashton Chr et aliorum Qui dicunt quod Jonannes de Longshay vicarius ecclesie de Hurslegh in Com Southampton et Willus Mawson Capellanⁿ nuper fuerunt seisiti in dominico suo ut de feodo de Manerio de Salebury et Clayton juxta Ribchester[1] cum pertinentiis ac de certis messuagiis terris et tenementis in Ribchester Oswaldtwisell et Dutton ac etiam certis messuagiis terris et tenementis in parva Penhulton in Blakeburnshire &c.

[1] Vide pp. 145–147 in vol. xcv., and pp. 12 and 13 in this vol. Vide also note on Sibilla de Fulthorpe, p. 105, vol. xcv. The previous inquisition on this same Henry, held at Preston (see p. 12 of this vol.), relates to his own proper estate of Chepyn, whereas this inquisition refers to properties of the Cliderou family, held by his wife, their heiress, which she had sought to divert from her right heirs by sundry settlements in favour of her husband's illegitimate son, Richard.

[1] Sir Henry de Houghton had an illegitimate son named Richard, from whom descended the Hoghtons of Little Pendleton, an estate which was part of the inheritance of Johanna, his fathers wife, probably yielded to him as a compromise after sundry debates with the Talbots of Salebury, who were the heirs of Johanna, being descended from Isabella, daughter of Richard de Cliderow, brother of Sir Robert de Cliderou, the father of Sibilla, who was the mother of Johanna by her first marriage with Richard de Radcliff of Ordsall. Vide note, p. 105, vol. xcv.

In the earlier editions of Whitaker's History of Whalley, Richard is improperly represented as the issue of Sir Henry and his wife Johanna.

[1] In the Inquisition 3 Henry VI. (vide p. 12), Henry de Houghton is stated to have died "die Sabati prox. ante festum Sti Andree Apostoli." (25 November.) This Inquisition states that he died "die Sabbati prox. ante festum Sti Edmundi Regis," which is 18 November 3 Henry VI., 1424.

William de Balderston.=

Joane.=Ralph Langton, miles defunct ante, 2 Edward 4.

Isabell.=Rot: Harrington, Esqr.

In the pedigree of Langton, baron of Newton (Baines's History of Lancashire), Jane Balderston is represented to be the wife of Ralph Langton, baron of Newton, but this is irreconcilable with dates. Who this Sir Ralph was does not appear. She afterwards married Sir John Pilkington, founder of the chantry in Wakefield church, and had a son who died under age. In her widowhood she entered into religion. Her will is given in Whitaker's History of Whalley.

The Bailiwick of Amoundernes came to the Balderstons by marriage with the heiress of Banaster, and the Banasters had it from the Singletons in like manner.

HENRICUS DE LANGTON ET ELIZABETHA UXOR EJUS.

13 Edward IV. (10*th May* 1473.)

The Copy of these Inquisitions from Christopher Towneley's MS. having been lost, the Editor can only supply the substance, of which he had made an extract.

IT appeared that Henry's estates were all in settlement. The inquisitions were held at Preston, on Monday, after the feast of the Holy Cross (10th May 13 Edward IV., 1473), when Richard Langton, Esq., was found son and heir and of full age. It was recited in Henry's inquisition that, having been seised of the manors of Walton-le-Dale and Newton-in-Makerfeld in his demesne as of fee, he had granted them to James Harrington knt., Walter Wrottesley knt., John Banastre son of William Banastre of Lostock, and James Banastre chaplain, who became seised. He, therefore, was not seised thereof at the time of his death. The feoffees held the manor of Walton by knights service, and the manor of Newton by fealty and a rent of Two Shillings per annum. The entire manors were worth "ultra reprisas centum marcas." His wife, Elizabeth, had one third of her husband's manors for term of her life.

Henry died on Friday next before the feast of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross, 11 Edward IV. (13 September 1471).

Elizabeth died on the Feast of St Hugh the Bishop, last past (17th November 1472, 12 Edward IV.)

The succession in the following pedigree, as printed in Roman type, gives the names and dates proved by the inquisitions referred to in vol. xcv., p. 137, and at pp. 31, 72 and 93 of the present volume. Matter extracted from other sources is printed in Italics.

The most correct and detailed account of the Langton family occurs in the History of the Parish of Langton, in the Hundred of Gartree, County of Leicester, by the Rev. John Harwood Hill, B.A., &c.—printed for the Subscribers, 1867—pp. 18*–27*.[1]

This family, having taken up its residence in Lancashire in the latter part of the thirteenth century, and having parted with the patrimonial estate in the sixteenth century, has not attracted attention from the historians, Burton and Nichols, but they have some scattered notices of the name, and they both record from the Matriculus of Hugh, Bishop of Lincoln, A.D. 1220, under the head of Ecclesia de Langton — "monachi Sancti Ebrulfi (at Utica in Normandy) percipiunt ibi duas partes decimarum garbarum de dominico H. de Braybroke et Roberti de Langeton"; and Mr. Nichols quotes an inquisition of the year 1292 on the death of Philip de Marmion, wherein it was found that Thomas de Langton held four and a half carucates of land in Langton of John de Langton, which John held them of Philip de Marmion as of the castle and manor of Tamworth, by the service of one knight's fee. Esc. 20 Edw. I., No. 36.

[1] Errors of the press in Mr. Hill's volume. On the second page of the Langton pedigree (p. 20*) the date of the death of Sir Ralph Langton, son of Henry, for "6th" read "26th" February.

On the same page, the father of Ann, second wife of Sir Thomas Langton, for "John" read "Thomas" Talbot.

On the same page, add to the sons of Sir Thomas Langton, "William," named in Preston Guild Roll in 1562.

At page 22*, line 2, for "John" read "Robert."
,, 27*, ,, 4, dele "Ulster King of Arms."
,, ,, ,, 8, after "Captain" insert "Langton, son and heir of."
,, ,, ,, 13, after "Sable" add "ear, argent."
,, ,, ,, 21, for "vairy" read "vair."

From him descend the Langtons of Lowe in Hindley, who held that estate until the middle of the last century. Besides the property in Hindley a carucate of land at Hendon in Middlesex, and the patrimonial estates in Leicestershire, had been given to him by his father. These last were alienated about the middle of the sixteenth century. The Langtons of Kilkenny in Ireland claim descent from this line. See History of the Parish of Langton, by the Rev. J. H. Hill; and vol. iv, p. 59, No. 44, new series of the "South-East of Ireland Archæological Society."

The public events in which John de Langton, Bishop of Chichester, took part during his career as Chancellor in the reign of Edward I. and afterwards for a short period in that of Edward II., have been recorded in Lord Campbell's Lives of the Chancellors; but he is there improperly attributed to the family of Langton in Lincolnshire.*

He was a man of taste and munificence. The great window in the South transept of Chichester Cathedral was constructed by him, and his canopied tomb stands beneath it. He enriched his church by various endowments and gave to the University of Oxford, where he had been educated, a fund for the assistance of poor graduates, some account of the management of which, described as Bishop Langton's Chest or Hutch, is to be found in the Munimenta Academica (Rolls series), vol. i, p. 133.

An evidence of his spirit and courage is given in Sir Edward Coke's Institutes, also mentioned by Stow. He had excommunicated John, the last Earl of Warren and Surrey, for adultery; upon which the Earl made an armed attack upon him. He overcame the Earl, and imprisoned him and his followers. The offence of the Earl is generally stated to have been the abduction of Alice, Countess of Lancaster; but, as the date of this outrage is fixed by Walshingham† as in A.D. 1316, if the date of the excommunication has been correctly quoted by Stow, we may conclude that this sentence was pronounced on account of the Earl's adulterous intercourse with Maud de Nerford, by whom he had several children, and on which account he underwent ecclesiastical censures, both in Norfolk and Kent. This Earl had succeeded his grandfather when only eighteen, in the year 1304, and in the year following, King Edward I. gave him the hand of Johan, daughter of Henry, Count de Barr, who, in 1294, had married Eleanor, the King's eldest daughter, whose affianced husband, Alphonso, King of Aragon, had died three years before that date. Johan was, therefore, a mere child at that time, and when in the following reign a suit for divorce was instituted on the pleas of a precontract with Maud de Nerford and consanguinity with the family of Barr, she was living within the precincts of the Palace, and found, therefore, not to be liable to citation in the ordinary Courts. The probability is, that no divorce took place, as she had jointure on the Earl's lands after his death. It is doubtful if they ever cohabited. Maud was amply endowed by the Earl, as was also Isabel (daughter of Sir Robert de Holand, and Maud, his wife), whom the Earl, in his will, names as his "compaigne." Though treated by Dugdale as being his wife, there can be little doubt that she was his concubine.

See notes on this subject in Dallaway's Parochial Topography of the Rape of Arundel, Part I, vol. ii.

[3] Grant of the wardship and marriage of Alice Banastre to John de Langeton. From Dodsworth's MS. in Bodleian Library, vol. cxxix, fo. 17. Printed in Mr. Hill's History of Langton, p. 18*.

Universis presentes litteras inspecturis Edmundus Henrici Regis Anglie filius salutem in Domino. Ita tamen quod dicta Alicia non disparagetur. Et nos et heredes nostri

* Lord Campbell also assigns to the Lincolnshire family, but without evidence, Cardinal Stephen Langton, Archbishop of Canterbury. Parkin, the historian of Norfolk, cites a pedigree connecting him with Walter de Langton, Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, who held property at West Langton in Leicestershire. Archbishop Parker and Weever assign his origin to Leicestershire, and the City of Exeter claims to have been his birth-place. No conclusion can be drawn from arms attributed to him, as there is no contemporaneous heraldic example, and Mr. Maurice has shewn reasons for the belief that he was of a Yorkshire family. A French historian draws the conclusion from his surname, that he was of a Saxon stock; but this is inconclusive, Norman settlers constantly assuming family names from their estates. Baptismal names offer a better ground of speculation as to race. The Archbishop's brother, who was designated to the Archbishopric of York, bore the name of Simon, which we also find in use in the Yorkshire family of Langton.

† Walshingham distinctly fixes the date of the abduction of the Countess of Lancaster, but he mixes up with that event the claim made by Sir Richard de St. Martin upon her person and estates, and in the index the abduction is ascribed to him: whereas, according to Rapin, his claim was made in the Courts of Law with the privity and countenance of the King. His plea of prior connection with her (which to her shame she did not disavow), was a most improbable story, as she could only have been nine years old when contracted with Thomas of Lancaster.

dictum maritagium dicto Domino Johanni et assignatis suis warrantizabimus contra omnes. Pro hac autem donacione et concessione dedit nobis dictus Johannes 250 marcas sterlingas. [4] Under the fine levied by Sir Robert de Langton and his wife Margaret (for details of which see Mr. Hill's History of Langton), John, son of their younger son Robert, inherited, and had a partition of deeds with his cousin, Ralph, Baron of Newton, an indenture respecting which, made at Wigan 19 Richard II (1395), is given in extenso by Mr. Hill, p. 23*. He also recites a deed which shows that the Leicestershire property was still held by Robert Langton of Lowe in 1537. The inquisition taken at the death of this Robert's grandson Robert, 37 Elizabeth, recites this fine, but gives an erroneous account of the early descents, making John to be son and not grandson of Robert and Margaret, and giving him as a successor, a son Gilbert, whereas there is no doubt that Gilbert was his brother. A copy of this inquisition, made for the Editor, confounds this Gilbert with a later one. The pedigrees given by Mr. Hill bring this line down to Edward Langton of Lowe, who was buried at Wigan 27th March 1733, dying without issue.

[6] In the pedigree in Baines's History of Lancashire, vol. iii. p. 642, the last Sir Thomas Langton is stated to have been Sheriff of Lancashire 9 Elizabeth. This must refer to his grandfather, at whose death, 11 Elizabeth, he was only 8 years old. In 32 Elizabeth, when

Mr. Hoghton fell in the affray at Lea,* he could not have been more than 29 years old instead of 62 as stated by Baines. A tablet to his memory in Wigan church (removed to Duxbury hall, where it was seen and copied by Dodsworth) is printed in vol. li. of the Chetham series, p. 251, as well as by Mr. Hill.

Baines alludes to a temporary alienation of the manor of Newton in the reign of Edw rd IV., misled, probably, by an estate of the Duke of Exeter in Newton, being recited in the Rolls of Parliament as the Manor of Newton. Furthermore, it was only the Duke's moiety of the manor of Haydock which was forfeited—the other moiety inherited by the Leghs being intact.

On the 22nd February 1872, Mr. William Beamont read, at the meeting of the Historic Society of Lancashire and Cheshire, a paper on "The Fee of Makerfield, with an account of some of its Lords, Barons of Newton." A continuation of this history was printed in 1873, in the Society's Transactions, new series, vol. xiii.

THE FAMILY OF BANASTRE.

The descent of the Banastre family is gathered from the Rolls of Parliament (A° 6to Edward I., No. 5), Robert Banastre there preferring a petition for the restoration of lands in Wales, and reciting the settlement of the family in Lancashire.

A pedigree is given at p. 113 of the Coucher Book of Whalley Abbey (vol. x. of the Chetham series), to which foundation the Banastres, and their successors, the Langtons, were benefactors; and many particulars are given in the second article of vol. xcviii.

Mr. Beltz, in his Memorials of the Order of the Garter, collected interesting matter respecting this family and some of their congeners; but made a singular mistake in speaking of Englefeld as in Berkshire, whereas it was the designation of that part of North Wales where the Banastres had settled soon after the Conquest and built their castle of Prestatyn.

* Some details of this affair will be found in the new edition of the History of Whalley. Proceedings in consequence of it are mentioned by Baines.

A minute account of the Banastre family was given in No. 3 Supplement, p. 334, of the Archæologia Cambrensis, July 1846. Since that article was written the Editor found evidence that the Banastres of Bank, in Leyland Hundred, were descended from Thurstan, the younger brother of Robert fitz Thurstan, which Robert no doubt derived his arms of three chevrons from the Orrebys, his wardship and marriage having been acquired (in 3 Henry III.) by Philip de Orreby, Justice of Chester, at the price of 500 marks. Robert granted lands in Newton in Wirrall, in the County of Chester, to his brother Thurstan (see Ormerod's Cheshire, vol. ii., p. 274), who is stated by Dodsworth to have married Maria (not named in the pedigree in Ormerod), sister of Agatha de Vernon, wife of Venables, Baron of Kinderton. He was clearly the progenitor of the Banastres of Bank, as lands in Newton are recorded to have been held in the reigns of Henry V., VI., VII. and VIII. under that family. They bore for their arms, argent, a cross patonce, sable.

Thomas Banastre, Knight of the Garter, of whom Mr. Beltz gives an interesting memoir, and whose pedigree is printed in vol. xcv. of the Chetham series, p. 16, belonged to a junior branch of this line, as may be inferred by his family's tenure in Bretherton being a subordinate one. (See vol. xcv., p. 14.) They had acquired by marriage the estate of Pava Singleton in Amounderness, in right of which they found a bailiff for that hundred, a tenure by serjeantcy which passed from them to the Balderstons. (See pp. 62 and 71 of this volume.)

The Thomas Banastre, whose daughter brought Great Hole to the Hesketh, was neither Knight of the Garter nor Baron of Newton as stated in the pedigree of Hesketh printed in Baines's History of Lancashire and elsewhere.

Two corrections to be made in the article in Archæologia Cambrensis may be pointed out here. The identification of the arms of a spread-eagle, vert, in Wigan church, as the paternal coat of Langton is not confirmed (see discussion of this subject in vol. xcviii., p. 27), and the presumptive relationship of Roger Langton of Broughton Tower, to Thomas, the last Baron of Newton, should have been stated in less positive terms, the evidence being incomplete.

Robert Banastre, son of the grantor of Newton in Wirrall to Thurstan his brother, and petitioner on the Rolls of Parliament for the recovery of his lands in Prestatyn, lived till about 14 Edward I.

It is stated in Ormerod's Cheshire, vol. ii., p. 316, that Edward III. granted the manor of Little Mollington to Robert Banastre. The inquisition of 41 Edward III., from which such a grant is inferred, uses the word tenuit, showing that a more ancient holding was referred to.

Robert Banaster, who gave the estate of Mollington Banastre to his daughter Clementia, in marriage with William de Lea, died early in the reign of Edward I. Their daughter, Sibilla, carried the estate in marriage to the Hoghtons, who held it under the Langtons as heirs of Banastre.

One of the early Banastres had founded a chantry at Rokedene within his manor of Newton and the Parish of Winwick. Licenses for services there are found in the Lichfield Registers, one of which bearing date 1405 names Robert de Langton, and is so quoted in Gastrell's Noticia, and in the History of the Chantries, but the date proves this to be an error for Ralph. The Barons of Newton had also oratories in their mansions of Walton-le-Dale and Newton.

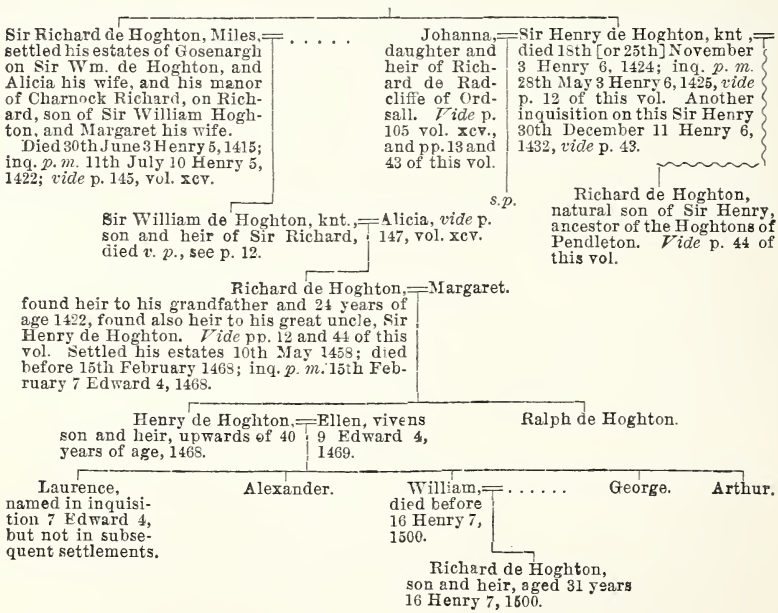
This Sir Richard Hoghton married Sibilla, daughter of Sir William de Lea, and heiress of her brother Sir Henry. Richard de Hoghton died in 14 Edward 3, and was succeeded by his son Adam, father of Richard and Henry, the first in the following pedigree.



Alexander had an only daughter, Anna, by his wife, Elizabeth, daughter of William Troutbeck. "Habuit assign dotis, 17 Henry VII.

The last Richard in the foregoing descents married first, Alice, daughter and coheiress of Sir Thomas Ashton of Ashton-under-Lyne, by his second wife, Agnes, daughter and coheiress of Sir James Harrington. His eldest son, Thomas, had an only daughter, Jane, married to James, son and heir of Roger Bradshaw of Haigh. The line of Hoghton was carried on by a younger son, Thomas, issue of Sir Richard's second marriage to Alice Morley. They have, therefore, no right to bear the Ashton quartering with which they have been credited. Thomas was slain at Lea Hall, 32 Elizabeth, in an affray of which some account is given in the new edition of Whitaker's History of Whalley.

By reference to vol. xcv., p. 150, it will be seen that Sir William de Holand had, by Margaret de Shoresworth, two sons, Thurstan and John. Thurstan's birth, from some cause or other, was not treated as legitimate. He held the manor of Sharples by gift of his father, 9 Edward II., and from his mother, the Lady of Denton, he received that estate. Thurstan's son Richard married Ameria, daughter and heiress of Adam de Kenyon, and died 3 Henry IV. 1402. From him descended the family of Holand of Denton and Heaton.* William, a younger son of Thurstan, obtained an estate at Clifton in the valley of the Irwell by his marriage with Margery, daughter

* The stern logic of dates disproves the origin ascribed to this family by Sir William Dugdale and repeated without verification by other genealogists, also by the Rev. John Booker in his History of the Ancient Chapel of Denton, printed in the second volume of the Chetham Miscellanies. Currency is also given to Sir William Dugdale's version of the descent of the Holands of Denton from a supposed younger son of Sir Robert de Holand and his wife Matilda De-la-Zouch, in an article in the last volume of Miscellanies (xcvi. of the Chetham series). Mr. Booker assigns the marriage of Ameria de Kenyon in 1358 to a Richard Holand, occurring much later in the pedigree than its date would justify; and he ought to have to Henry de Trafford, and coheir with her sister Cecilia, wife of R. de Tildesley. Their sons were Otho and Henry.

Dodsworth cites an indenture by which R. La Warre, D'nus de Mancestre, grants half of Collihurst cum p'tin in Mancestre to "Willimo filio Thurstani de Holand et discovered this error by finding that only four subsequent generations were thus accounted for by him in three centuries.

Sir William Dugdale had placed too easy faith in a MS. volume of Pedigrees of no authority, which attributes to Sir Robert de Holand, the first baron, a younger son William, and treated him as the ancestor of the Holands of Denton and Heaton; but there is no evidence of Sir Robert having had a son named William.

Sir Robert, Lord de Holand, who died in 1328, as appears by inquisitions taken in divers counties in 3 Edward III., was succeeded by his oldest son Robert, then only sixteen years of age. Now, as Richard, son of Thurstan, was named in an entail 2 Edward III.,† and as Thurstan, his father, son of William de Holand and Margaret de Shoresworth, was a grantee and a grantor in the previous reign, when Sir William died, it is manifest that the latter could not have been the younger brother of a youth sixteen years of age in 3 Edward III. The right, therefore, to use the quarterings belonging to De-la-Zouch should not have been conceded to the Holands of Denton, and to the representatives of heiresses of that line.

On p. 452 of the first volume of Mr. Harland's revised and improved edition of Baines's History of Lancashire, he has introduced a most extraordinary account of the descent of the Holands of Heaton, treating them as a distinct line from those of Denton, and deriving them from William and Alan, both represented to be sons of Sir Robert Holand of Up-Holand. He moreover makes Sir Robert's line to have been a younger branch of a family seated at Holland in Lincolnshire in the time of Edward the Confessor. The simple facts are these:—The Holands of Denton and Heaton were an identical race, whose origin is described above. The ancestors of Sir Robert Holand were seated at, and took their name from, Up-Holland in Lancashire, and had no connection whatever with the ancient family of Holand in Lincolnshire. Both these families were named from the properties they inherited. Down Holland in Lancashire gave the name of Holand to another distinct family. (See vol xcv. p. 27.)

The properties held by Sir Robert de Holand, the first Lord of Parliament of that name, and of his wife Matilda De-la-Zouch, centred ultimately in the Crown by two separate forfeitures, the one of Lovel, who was heir general of Sir Robert, by descent from Matilda his great granddaughter, and by that of Henry, Duke of Exeter, who had inherited the estates held in tail male. (See p. 1 of the present volume.)

Sir Robert de Holand, the father of Sir Otho, Sir Thomas, Earl of Kent, and of Alan, besides an older son, Robert, who succeeded him in his Barony in the second year of Edward III., does not appear to have had any other sons. The careers of Otho and Thomas have been given with great care in the Memorials of the Order of the Garter, by Mr. Beltz. Otho died s p. 33 Edward III. Of Alan we know little, except that he was endowed with the manors of Dalbury and Wirksworth in the county of Derby (held under Henry, Earl of Lancaster), in reversion, after the death of his father and mother, with remainder to Robert's right heirs. The inference may be fairly drawn, that he died without issue, as we find Dalbury recited amongst the possessions of Sir Robert, second Lord of Parliament, at his death in 47 Edward III. (See Dugdale's Baronage.) Sir Robert and Maud had a daughter, Isabella (not usually named in the pedigrees), who was richly endowed by the last Earl of Warren and Surrey, and named in his will as his "compaigne."

† 2 Edward III., 1328. Robert, son of John de Sharples, gives to Thurstan de Holand and Richard his son, a piece of land in Sharples called Hughurst in the hamlet of Harwood.

18 Edward III, 1344. Richard de Holand had a grant from Thurstan his father of a place called Bromhous in Penylton.

19 Edward III., 1345. He made a settlement of Heaton, Denton and Sharples, and died on the 5th day "post festum Sci' Petri et Pauli," 3 Henry IV., 1402, holding Heaton from the King, Denton from Nicholas de Longford, and Kenyon, in right of his wife, from Ralph de Langton, Baron of Newton, leaving Thurstan, his son and heir. (Kuerden's MS. in Chetham Library.) Dodsworth's MSS. supply the materials for elucidating the descent of Margaret de Shoresworth and of her issue.

Oteo filio suo 35 Edward III.," 1361. Holand's seal to this instrument is described as bearing "a lyon ramp^t gard^t, field semé of fleur-de-lys, over all a bend."

At this point distinct evidence of descent fails us.

In the visitation of 1533 no pedigree is entered, but the arms are given with a second quarter sable, three maidens' heads couped, two and one, and with the crest of a wolf, passant. These arms are supposed to be those of Wolveley. In vol. xcv. p. 52, a note recites that a certain Robert de Holand had intruded by violence upon the Prestwich estates, on the plea of having married Margaret, daughter and coheir of Thomas de Wolveley; but at the inquisition on Roger de Longley 17 Richard II. 1394, p. 51 of the same volume, it was found that Margaret had become a nun at Seton in 1360, and that Agnes, her sister, succeeded, and dying without issue their inheritance passed through their father's sister Alicia, to her daughter Johanna, wife of Richard de Longley.

It may not, therefore, be unreasonable to infer, that this Robert might have been an intervening link between Otho, son of William and Margery, and the Otho with whom the descents proved by this inquisition commence, but this suggestion is purely conjectural.

The Holands of Clifton entered at the visitation of 1567, as also did the Holands of Sutton, whom the heralds appear to have treated as an offshoot from Clifton; but this is manifestly erroneous, as Robert de Holand, son of Richard (younger brother of Thurstan, the grandfather of Sir Robert, who was raised to the peerage), acquired in the reign of Edward I. from John de Sutton that estate, which was inherited by his posterity.

14 Henry VII (19*th Nov.* 1498.)

INQUISITION taken at Chorley on Monday 19th of November 14 Henry 7, 1498, after the death of Sir JAMES HARINGTON K^t^. The jurors say that long before his death the said Sir JAMES H. was seized in his demesne as of fee of the Manor of Westley Blakerode and certain lands and tenements in Penyngton Preston Chorley Braderton Dynkley Fysheweke Brokesland Derby Pulton Magna Pulton Parva and Turton in the county of Lancaster—viz. to him and his heirs by virtue of divers feoffments and grants thereof made to his ancestors; and being so seized enfeoffed Thomas Radcliffe of Standish clerk William Radcliffe of Ordsal Esqre and John Radcliffe of the same place son and heir apparent of the s^d^ William Robert Radcliffe William Radcliffe brothers of the said Robert John Norwych Nicholas Gryffyn Esq^res^ Alexander Radcliffe son and heir of John Radcliffe, Robert Longley Esqre Thomas Tydesley of Tyldesley Roger Hylton, Roger his son, Richard Holland Thurstan Holland son and heir apparent of Richard Holland of Denton and others, by his charter dated 10 December 8 Henry 7 (1492) to the use of him the said Sir JAMES H. to fulfil his last Will, by virtue of which feoffment the said Trustees were seized; and afterwards the said Sir JAMES H. by his Will declared that Isabella his Wife should hold for term of her life all and singular the premises and after her death remainder to the right heirs of the said Sir JAMES H. of his body lawfully begotten. That AGNES ELIZABETH ALICE MARGARET ISABELLA ALIANORE JOAN ANNE CLEMENCE and KATHARINE were daughters of the said Sir JAMES H. and his next heirs, and that each and all of them were of the full age of 21 years and upwards. And that the said Sir JAMES died on 26th of June 12 Henry 7 (1497).

11 Henry VIII. (14*th* . . . . . 1519.)

INQUISITION taken at Wigan on 14th of . . . . . 11 Henry VIII (1519) after the death of Isabella Haryngton Widow—recites certain settlements of lands made by Sir JAMES HARYNGTON K^t^ deceased—which lands the said Isabella Haryngton held on the day of her death for term of her life by the grant and will of the said Sir JAMES H. The reversion after the said Isabella's death belonging (among others) to Isabella wife of John Tresham Esqre one of the daughters and Co-heirs of the aforesaid Sir JAMES H., by reason of the division and partition thereof made between the daughters and co-parceners of the aforesaid Sir JAMES HARYNGTON.

Like settlement as to other lands, the reversion belonging to CLEMENCE wife of Henry Norris Esqre another of the daughters and Co-heirs.

As to other lands the reversion belonging to ALICE wife of Ralph Standysshe Esqre another of the daughters and Co-heirs.

Other lands the reversion belonging to Joan wife of Roger Asshagh, cousin (grand-daughter) and one of the heirs of the aforesaid Sir JAMES HARYNGTON, viz, the daughter of MARGARET one other of the daughters of the said Sir JAMES H.[1]

Other lands settled on feoffees to the use of the said Sir JAMES H. and Isabella his wife during their lives, and after their decease to the use of Thomas Assheton K^t^ and AGNES his wife, daughter of the aforesaid JAMES and Isabella, and their heirs begotten between them, and that Alice the wife of Richard Hoghton

[1] The correction pointed out at p. xii in the preface to vol. xcviii, as being needed in the Visitation of 1567, equally requires to be made in that of 1613. In both cases, Joan, wife of Roger Asshagh [Asshawe], is represented to be the daughter of Sir James Haryngton, whereas she was his granddaughter, being the daughter of Christopher Hulton and his wife Margaret, one of the daughters and coheirs of Sir James Haryngton.

was the daughter and next heir of the said Sir Thomas Assheton and AGNES his wife.

Other lands settled to the use of Sir William Stanley Kt and ANNE his wife and the heirs of the said ANNE.

(Some parts of the inquisition are nearly illegible.)

The jurors further say that the said Isabella Haryngton died on the 20th of June in the 10 Henry VIII (1518) and that the next heirs of the aforesaid Isabella on the day of taking the inquisitions were:—

ANNA, wife of Sir William Stanley Kt 41 years old.

ALICE, wife of Richard Hoghton 22 years old.

ISABELLA, wife of John Tresham 43 years old.

KATHERINE, wife of William Mirfyld 33 years old.

CLEMENCE, wife of Henry Norres 35 years old.

ALICE, wife of Ralph Standysshe 48 years old.

Joan, wife of Roger Asshagh 29 years old (being daughter of MARGARET one of the daughters and Co-heirs of Sir JAMES H.)

James Assheton,[2] son of Edmund Assheton, Esqre 24 years old.

Elynour Leycester, widow, 50 years old.

Henry Lumley,[3] of Reyssheton in Co. Northton, 22 years old.

[2] He being the son of Johanna, Jane or Jennet, daughter of Sir James Haryngton.

[3] Son of Elizabeth, daughter of Sir James and Isabella.

PILKINGTON OF PILKINGTON.

SO much that is erroneous has been repeated about the ancient family of Pilkington, that a pedigree, showing their close connexion with the family of Harrington, may not here be out of place. It is followed by extracts from the Public Records, for which the Editor was indebted to Mr. William Hardy.

a b

Arthur, a base son. (Vincent.) — . . . .

Thomas Pilkington (Vincent.)

Richard. Samuel. (According to Vincent, on the authority of Thomas.)

Sir Thomas Pilkington, of full age in 1451 when found heir to his uncle by inq. 29 Henry 6; sheriff of Lancashire at various times between 1463 and 1482; first in entail by fine, 39 Hen. 6; his estates in Lancashire were forfeited after the battle of Bosworth, and conferred upon the Earl of Derby; Fell at the battle of Stoke 1487. (In 1488 his settled estates were forfeited and granted to Lord Strange, son of Thomas, first Earl of Derby; but the attainder was reversed, and his son succeeded to them.)

Margaret, daughter of Sir Richard Harrington. Licence on account of consanguinity 1442.

Roger, second in entail; fine 39 Henry 6, 1460.

Edmund, third in entail; fine 39 Henry 6, 1460.

Elizabeth, licence on account of consanguinity 1442. (In vol. xcv, p. 111, this lady is stated to have been named in the fine, 8 Henry 6, 1430, in remainder to John, Edmund and Robert Pilkington. This is a mistake, the person so named being the earlier Elizabeth, her mother-in-law.

Sir William Harrington, fifth in entail, fine 39 Henry 6, 1460; died 12th Aug. 3 Henry 7.

Alice, daughter of John Savage.

Sir Roger Pilkington, 1493, 8-9 Henry 7, found by inq. heir to his father. Died 17 Henry 7, 1502, according to Vincent; certainly before 1539.

Sir James Harrington, 40 years old ad m. p.; died 26 June 1497, 12 Henry 7. See vol. xcv, p. 111, and for will and inquisition, see p. 167, ante.

Isabella, daughter of Sir Alexander Radcliffe of Ordsall. Died circa 11 Henry 8. 1519. See vol. xcv, p. 111, and p. 169, ante.

William Harrington, died v. p. and s. p., drowned with his bride, a daughter of the house of Trafford, at the ford of the Mersey, at Northenden, in 1490.

Agnes, wife of Sir Thos. Assheton of Ashton-u.-Lyne. Her daughter and heiress, Alice, married Sir Richard Hoghton.

Elizabeth, wife of John Lumley of Ryssheton.

Alice, wife of Ralph Standish of Standish.

Margaret, wife of Christopher Hulton of Farnworth, whose daughter Jane (improperly described in the Visitations of 1567 and 1613, as daughter of Sir James Harrington), married Roger Asshawe.

Isabella, wife of John Tresham.

Johanna (or Joan) wife of Edmund Assheton of Chadderton.

Alice, wife, first, of. . ., second, of Edward Saltmarsh.

Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Huntley.

Margery, wife of Hen. Pudsey.

Joan, wife of John Daniel of Daresbury, County Chester.

The following extracts from the public records are given in verification of the statements in the foregoing pedigree. Most of them refer to the Verdon inheritance.

on PILKINGTON OF YORKSHIRE AND NOTTINGHAMSHIRE.

The Pilkingtons of Yorkshire and Nottinghamshire bore the same arms as the Lancashire Pilkingtons, viz., Argent a cross patonce gules, voided of the field, with the difference of an annulet in the dexter chief point. As they are not found named in any of the entails of the Verdon inheritance, they could not have been near kindred. Vincent's attempt, therefore, to connect the two lines is manifestly a failure. Both were adherents of the house of York.

In 1 Edward IV., Henry Pilkington, Esq., had a grant of the forfeited estates of John Catterall in the counties of York and Lancaster. Towneley records that he died intestate, and that Sir John Pilkington administered to his effects. (Vide p. 68 of the Evidences of Lancashire Gentry, now in the British Museum.)

John Pilkington, described as Esquire of the body to the King, had, in the same year, a grant of lands forfeited by Sir John de Roos, with reversion of the jointure of Margaret his widow. In 13 Edward IV. he is described as knight of the body to the King in a grant of the forfeited estates of John Catterall of Selby. (Apparently the same which had been previously given to Henry Pilkington.)

In 16 Edward IV. (as appears by an Inq. ad quod damnum) he founded a chantry in the south aisle of the parish church of All Saints, Wakefield, for services at the altar of St. Mary.

In 3 Edward IV. we find John Pilkington, Esq.,present at Badsworth church, with Johanna his wife (described in the previous year, as Johanna, late the wife of Ralph Langton), with Isabel her sister, wife of Robert Harrington. (Towneley.) These ladies were the daughters and coheirs of William de Balderstone. Vide pp. 71, 72 of the present volume, and pp. 28, 29 of vol. xcviii.) Sir John's will is dated at Skipton, 28th June 1478, and proved 30th June 1479. He directs his body to be buried in the chantry at Wakefield, and makes provision for his bastard son Robert, from whom descend the Pilkingtons of Chevet, Baronets of Nova Scotia. By the Inq. p. m., 19 Edward IV., we find the date of his death to be 29 December 18 Edward IV., and that his heir was Edward Pilkington, then of the age of twelve years, whom by will he "beseeched my Lord of Gloucester to place in the house of my Lord Chamberlain till he be of the age of sixteen years, and then to be put to the King's pleasure." Edward Pilkington died in ward to King Henry VII. in the first year of his reign, when the forfeited estates granted to his father reverted to the crown.

Christopher Towneley gives a pedigree in which Johanna, widow of Sir John, is represented to have married Sir Thomas, son of Nicholas Wortley. This receives confirmation by the following entry extracted from No. 433 of the Harleian MSS. Grants, covenants, and other instruments, temp. Edward V. and Richard III., fo. 81^{b}. "Sir Charles Pylkington hath a privie seale to the Treasurer and barons to acquyte and discharge Sir Thomas Worteley and Dame Jane his wife for the payment of xl^{li} yearely to be paid for th'exibic'on of Edward, son and heire of Sir John Pylkington deceased during his nonnage." Nevertheless, in her will dated 2 January 1497 (printed by Whitaker in the History of Whalley, p. 540, edition 1818), she describes herself in these words, "I, Dame Jane Pilkington, widow, make and ordain this my last Will and Testament. First, I bequeth my bodye to be buried in ye Nunnes Quire of Monketon, in my habit, holding my hande upon my breast, with my ring upon my finger, having taken in my resolves the mantle and the ring," &c.

It has been stated that she took the veil 10 September 1488. There is probably some mistake in the dates; but as it is cited on the authority of Dodsworth, that she was admitted into religion by William, bishop of Dromore, she probably became a nun after the disposal of her property.

Sir Charles Pilkington, brother of Sir John of Gateforth, in the county of Nottingham, in right of his wife Elizabeth, heiress of that house, held lands in Derbyshire, Nottinghamshire and Warwickshire. His will is dated 3 July, 2 Richard III., 1484, at Worksop (where he was buried), and proved 25 June 1485. Besides his heiress Isabell, wife of Sir John Towneley, he had a base son Edward.

The wills of Sir John and Sir Charles Pilkington are in the Cotton MSS., British Museum.

The Thirty-third Report

OF THE

COUNCIL OF THE CHETHAM SOCIETY,

Read at the Annual Meeting, held, by permission of the Feoffees, in the Audit Room of Chetham's Hospital, on Wednesday, the 15th day of March, 1876, by adjournment from the 1st of March.

THE first of the publications for the year 1875–6, and the 96th in the Chetham Series, is Chetham Miscellanies, volume 5, containing, 1. A description of the State, Civil and Ecclesiastical, of the County of Lancaster, about the year 1590, by some of the Clergy of the Diocese of Chester. 2. A Visitation of the Diocese of Chester, by John, Archbishop of York, held in the Chapter House of the Collegiate and Parish Church of Manchester, 1590, with the Archbishop's corresponding Writ to the Clergy. 3. Letters on the Claims of the College of Arms in Lancashire in the time of James the First, by Leonard Smethley and Randle Holme, Deputy Heralds. 4. The Easter Rolls of Whalley, in the years 1552 and 1553. Edited by Canon RAINES. Amongst the volumes of the CHETHAM SOCIETY none have met with more general approbation than those in the Miscellaneous Series, and the present, in interest, must certainly be admitted to yield to none of its predecessors. The first and second articles which have every illustration, Historical and Biographical, which the Rev. Editor's thorough knowledge of the subject and never failing research can supply, are most valuable contributions to the Ecclesiastical and Social Annals of Lancashire towards the latter end of the sixteenth century. The first enters minutely into a great variety of particulars affecting the doctrine and discipline of the church, and the superstitious and irregular practices in burials, baptisms, and marriages, adopted in different districts throughout the county, and presents a most graphic picture, coloured, no doubt in some degree by the peculiar tendencies of the ministers whose names are attached to the representation, of what was then the state of this part of the kingdom. Canon Raines is of opinion that this paper is in the handwriting of Mr. Oliver Carter, Fellow of the Collegiate Church, Manchester, the answerer of Bristow's Motives, and the opponent in the chapter, of Dr. Dee. The second article gives a long writ, the account of the Visitation in 1590, the correspondence of Archbishop Piers with the Lancashire Clergy. The Archbishop was a rigorous logician, and his answers to the preachers, whom he did not spare, now printed for the first time, are worthy of Bancroft himself. The third article in the volume contains the very amusing Letters of Leonard Smedley or Smethley, Deputy Herald of the College of Arms, residing in Manchester in the time of James the First, and which report his transactions with different families in reference, principally, to the due arrangements at their funerals, and the difficulties the unhappy Deputy encountered in obtaining his fees, the slow payment or nonpayment of which appears to have embittered his existence. To these are added two Letters of the Randall Holme of the period, by whom he had been recommended. The Editor's copious introduction and notes have added very considerably to the interest of these heraldic papers. The last article, the Easter Rolls of Whalley in 1552–3, from which we learn the exact number and names of the householders in the village of Whalley, and in each of its hamlets at the time of the dissolution of the abbey, fitly concludes this valuable and attractive volume, which does full justice to its Editors' deservedly high reputation.

The second of the publications for the year 1875–6, being No. 97 in the Chetham Series, consists of contributions to the History of the Ancient Parish of Prestbury in Cheshire, by Frank Renaud, M.D. The great extent of the Parish of Prestbury, which includes thirty-three townships, and the seats of old families and architectural antiquities which it contains, renders it a very fit and fertile subject for historical investigation, and every one must be glad that so accomplished an antiquary as Dr. Renaud has given us the result of his labours and inquiries connected with it in so pleasing and satisfactory a form, as that in which they are presented in this volume. The information it affords is of a very varied description, and while every attention is given to genealogical research and ancient edifices and remains, the modern history of the parish is not neglected. As may be anticipated, the seats of Adlington and Lyme, and the families so long associated with those places, whose annals might almost fill a volume, receive a fine measure of notice. These contributions to the History of Prestbury are rendered still more attractive by the fourteen excellent pictorial illustrations which accompany the volume, and which the members owe to Dr. Renaud's skill as a draughtsman, and to his great liberality in having them engraved at his own expense for this work.

The third volume for 1875–6, and which is volume 98 in the Chetham Series, is The Heraldic Visitation of Lancashire in 1533, edited by William Langton, Esq. This publication of the first of the Lancashire Heraldic Visitations, the complete series of which will thus have been issued by the Chetham Society, may be considered by the members as a matter for sincere congratulation. It is well known that in the knowledge of Lancashire Genealogy Mr. Langton ranks second to none, while his scrupulous and conscientious regard to rigid accuracy gives an authority to his statements and decisions in matters of pedigree which few others can be said to possess. The present is a very handsome volume, as all the arms of the different families are not merely described, as is the case in the other visitations issued by the Society, but engraved, and the historical elucidations and illustrations supplied by the editor contribute to render the book a very interesting one even to those who are not professed students of genealogy. The readers will be amused with the complaints of the worthy herald, whose painstaking in Lancashire does not seem to have been over liberally requited. Of Sir John Townley of Townley he observes, "I soght him all day ryding in the wyld countrey and his reward was ij^{s} w^{h} the guyde hadd the most p'te, and I had as evill a journey as ev^{r} I hadd;" and of Sir Richard Houghton, after adverting to a little private family matter of scandal, he subjoins, "He gave me nothing nor made me no good cheere but gave me proude words." The first of the three volumes has been issued, and the others, which are in progress of printing, will follow in due course.

During the last year this Society has lost by death one of the most valuable members of its council—Thomas Jones, Esq., F.S.A., librarian of Chetham library. A worthier representative of the honoured class of learned librarians never lived. The general recognition of his merits and character which has been elicited by his lamented departure is a sufficient testimony to the extent of the loss. To the CHETHAM SOCIETY and its various publications it was his delight to be of service, and he would most willingly have undertaken any degree of labour which could be productive of advantage to them. The two volumes of Catalogue of Popery Tracts edited by him for the Society may still be designated as the best bibliographical work upon that subject, and it is greatly to be regretted that death has interrupted his Biography of Dr. Dee, for which he had collected extensive materials.

All the works in the list of future publications which follows are either in progress of printing or arrangements have been made which will secure their appearance at no distant period.
